Experience

Mr. Lasch has a background with a multitude of building types including, religious facilities, affordable housing, universities, corporate offices, industrial, banks, and retail stores. Past projects he has been involved with have received local and national architectural awards and published in a number of books and magazines. Sustainable architecture and energy conservation are integral parts of his design process to build economically and with high regard for the environment. Along with the daily project responsibilities, Doug is very involved with the development of computer drafting technology, and exploring new methods for computer design presentation and modeling.

During personal time when not working on architectural projects, he spends time with his wife and daughters, and enjoys skiing, bicycling, and photographing architecture during his travels.
